At the Mission 200 at the Glen NASCAR race, professional driver Daniel Dye will pilot the No. 10 Chevrolet featuring the Race to Stop Suicide campaign. We are proud to announce that the Madison County Rural Health Council (MCRHC) will be represented on the rear bumper (TV panel) of the car—highlighting our commitment to mental health education and suicide prevention.

In 2018, Daniel and his father Randy Dye established the organization called Race to Stop Suicide an initiative with the goals to normalize the conversation surrounding mental health and suicide, educate people on what to look for/symptoms of those at risk, and to make sure those in need have access to resources.

This national platform comes at a critical time, as MCRHC has trained more than 5,000 adults and teens in Mental Health First Aid (MHFA) since implementing the program in 2022. These evidence-based trainings equip individuals, schools, workplaces, and community groups with the tools needed to recognize and respond to mental health and substance use challenges—promoting early intervention and saving lives. ➡
