A PRINCESS AMONG US

Submitted by Village of Richfield Springs Historian Harriett Geywits

She was known as ‘Susie’ by her friends and throughout her life which began in 1859 in Richmond, Missouri, where her parents had come to the area via covered wagon, she led a very unique life. She had become a prominent name in the social and business life of the world, but there was a question as to whether her appearance at the Earlington in the summer of 1889 would be successful. There was a natural curiosity as to seeing a real-live princess by those who had not been aware of her which added to the general appreciation of those who saw to the entertainment of the summer guests. The event was reported in the Richfield News on August 25th of that year.

“The parlor of the Earlington never looked more attractive. Artistic floral decoration enhanced the effect of the crimson plush and lace draping, the mixture of elegant and unique in furniture, the gorgeous mirrors and fine pictures.

One fine, grand square piano had its crimson cover fairly embroidered in flowers while another pretty rosewood upright stood open, ready to add its sweet strains to the occasion. The lights were brilliant and though an unusually warm evening, the windows had been thoughtfully opened to furnish a pleasant circulation of air, another point scored in favor of the considerate attention for his guest, which is making Mr. Eugene M. Earle a prince of hosts.

The seat of honor was a large, handsome chair by a charmingly colored table of Russian design, the background being an exceptionally happy arrangement of tall foliage and widow draping.

‘Every inch a princess’ was the unanimous verdict, as the Madame, escorted by Mr. Earle, took her seat before a closely packed and brilliant assemblage as ever met on that first night. The position of the Princess gave a three-quarter view of a strikingly regal looking form, beyond the average woman in size, of noble proportions, shapely, graceful turns and brilliant tasteful costuming. Her head is beautifully shaped and crowned by a coil of dark brown hair drawn smoothly up from the neck with slight, straight bangs and handsome diamond ornaments. Her features are fine and regular, the generous white flesh being not such as to dull the delicate outlines. The eyes are dark and thoughtful, the forehead intellectual, the mouth sweet and womanly with charming, appreciative curves at the corners. A warm color came as the slight struggle with the foreign tongue continued and interest in the subject increased. A rich cream satin, cut quite low and sleeveless, revealed a magnificent bust and arms, falling away upon the platform in artistic folds. The décolleté was finished with handsome Russian lace and a fine diamond necklace and diamond spray were the only decoration besides a corsage bouquet of pink roses and ferns.

The slight reserve which an American audience instinctively feels in the presence of European title, was immediately overcome by this lady’s straightforward and immediately earnest plunge into her subject. Her lecture was a resumé of imperial habits, manners and family relations in that much misrepresented, mysterious and thoroughly romantic Russian Court and was a forceful and highly interesting, setting aside many false conceptions in regard to Russian rule. The slightly broken accent added a charm to the reading which was listened to with breathless attention from first to last.

The reading was prefaced by a selection by the orchestra, singing by Alma Hultkranz and a fine violin solo by Anto Fuerst. A Russian tea followed in the spacious Earlington Hall.

Attending the tea were several of Richfield’s prominent young women serving as court: Miss Mabel Earle, radiant in pink and white; Miss Scranton, touching and romantic in black; Miss Davis, in all white lace; Miss Josie Thomson, in light blue; Miss Natalie Cantoni, in cream accordion plait with peculiar zigzag stripe running through it; Miss Carnick in red; the Misses Crimmins, Roome, Newcobe and Delmonico, all making a charming medley of bright eyes, white fingers, dainty ware, tiny sandwiches, and the beverage with lemon accompaniment which branded it the genuine article.”

How did ‘Susie’ become known as a princess? She certainly had a life of the rich and famous long before she attained her title. Her first husband, Albion Emery, who was the former Speaker of the House of Representatives and owned the Silver King Mine in Utah, amassing a fortune which was left to her when he died. She soon became know as the ‘Silver Queen’. Her second husband was Col. Edwin F. Homes, a lumber baron with mining interests. They had a two year honeymoon in Europe before returning to Salt Lake City. Homes died in 1927 and three years later, Susie married Dr. Radovan N. Delitch from Servia. They resided in Pasadena, California. At 74, she married Prince Nicholas Engalitcheff (1874-1935) who was a member of the Russia nobility and later the Imperial Russian Vice-Counsel during the early 1900s to Chicago. He was a purported cousin of Czar Nicholas. Susie thus became a Princess. Following her evening at the Earlington, it was reported: “ Princess Engalitcheff won friends as fast as she met people in Richfield. Her fine presence, unassuming manners, correct taste and honest, sensible conversation gained the instant favor of all thoughtful minds. She is one distinguished foreigner who is able to discriminate between local and general flaws in our country and who can commend as well as condemn. All those present drank to the health of the lady to whom they did honor, not because she was a Princess, but because they found in her a woman, an intelligent and discriminating visitor on our shores and a loyal and noble defender of her country.” She, at other times, was described as globe trotting and unconventional whose elaborate and costly social affairs attracted national attention. She is quoted as saying: ‘Why live if you can’t enjoy yourself?’. She died at age 83 in 1942, doing just that.
