THE INVENTION OF A LEGACY

Submitted by Village of Richfield Springs Historian
Harriett Geywitz

Advertised by all the local drug, jewelry and book store owners such as G. H. Hunt, Ainslie Buck, Walter Rankin, Raymond Ehrman and Edward Kitts, this was the perfect gift for graduations, weddings and as a remembrance marking special occasions. It also was given as a prize to winners in various races. There was no occasion when this luxury gift was not received with pride and cherished for years.

The item was the invention of Lewis Edson Waterman and perhaps you, or your relatives, have been recipients of one of the writing instruments that was produced by the company he started. They weren't the throw-away type that we are now familiar with. They were meant to be used and kept for many years.

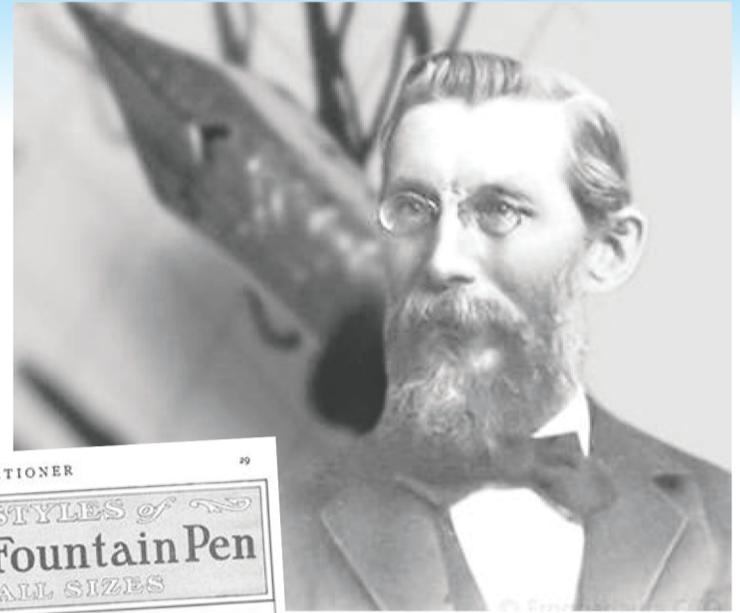

There has always been a need for people to be able to communicate and write for future generations. The first recorded use of a pen was in 3200 BC - a bamboo reed used to carve hieroglyphs on tablets. A brief history includes the quill pen in 600 AD, made from goose feathers, with more expensive ones made from swan feathers. The end of the feather was sharpened to make a point (the nib) which could be dipped in ink to write on parchment. Since the quill was hollow, the ink was drawn in and gave a longer period of writing time before another dip of ink was needed. 1825 and the industrial revolution brought about the manufacturing of steel nibs which had the advantage of being more durable and lasting longer than the quill. They were cheap and quick to mass produce and could be made in different shapes and widths.

Various forms of the fountain pen appeared about 1827 in answer to the demand for convenience in writing. The pen invented by the Romanian, Petrache Poenary, was described as 'a self-fueling endless portable quill with ink'. His design was never perfected due to problems with clotting and having to use an eyedropper to refill the pen. This was the type that was available during the early life of Lewis Waterman.

Born in Decatur, Otsego County, in 1836, his father was a wagonmaker who died when Lewis was three years old. He grew up on his stepfather's farm and when fifteen, left to go to a seminary school in Charlottesville. He was only there for three months before he took a teaching job which he supplemented with carpentry work during the summer. He was a very intelligent and energetic and by teaching stenography or Pitman Shorthand, he was able to travel across the States. At age 26, Waterman took a job in Michigan selling insurance, relocating to Boston two years later. He and Sara Ann Roberts, who had gained some fame as a medium, had married by then. She was soon revealed as a fraud and by 1870, after the death of their daughter, Lewis left Sara and their remaining children and moved to New York City. In 1872, Lewis married Sarah Ellen Varney and returned to work in the insurance business.

The story of why Waterman became interested in creating a more reliable pen is, perhaps, a myth, but makes for a good story. A typical pen of the day leaked all over a contract he had prepared for a large policy and by the time Waterman returned with a new document, his client had signed with someone else. Obviously annoyed and thinking he could make a better product, Waterman supposedly spent about ten years developing and refining the first commercially successful fountain pen, while working as a pen salesman for Frank Holland. Holland abandoned his company after six weeks ownership and Waterman stepped in and took over, fitting the pens with a simplified three fissure feed of his own design. This was a mechanism to ensure the control of ink - an internal rubber sac put into the barrel and fitted to the model of the pen. The ink flowed to the nib at a more reliable rate. The prototype was first made from the spoke of a wagon wheel taken from his brother's farm in upstate New York.

Around this time, there were many creative people who questioned how to make a better and more efficient fountain pen. This was evident by the number of patents filed for improvements including Waterman's. He is defined as a tough, savvy and innovative businessman. His first pen was patented in 1884 and sold from the rear of a cigar shop in New York City. He offered a five-year guarantee with each pen. The gold nibs that were used, were obtained from regular suppliers.

In 1885, Waterman moved his pen business from the cigar shop to his own land on Lower Broadway. He launched an advertising campaign with the company name of the Ideal Pen Company. Using his salesmanship and testimonials from others, ads showed in several popular magazines.

He continued to develop new models and at the 1900 Paris Exposition, the company was awarded a gold medal for their products.

Lewis Edson Waterman died in 1901 and his nephew, Frank D. Waterman, took leadership of the company. There was an impressive sales growth with offices now in Manhattan and factories in Connecticut, Montreal and later in Paris, France. Lewis Waterman's reputation had always focused on reliability and quality and he was not quick to respond to the changing fountain pen market. This, of course, had a detrimental effect on their marketing. Frank Waterman extended the development of improvements and had an active advertising program including contests. An example of this is found in the 1930 copyright of a song written by Peter Knight, who was then twelve years old, entitled 'The Song of the Ideal Pen'. It told of the many benefits and usefulness of the Ideal pen stating that the king of the world was the Waterman's Pen.

A large product range, including ink, contributed to the Waterman Pen Company becoming the market leader into the 1920s. They even provided a solid gold pen used at the signing of the Treaty of Versailles in 1919, marking the end of World War I.

More of Waterman's contemporaries had increased their product ranges with new innovations and technical advances by the 1930s, but by the 1940s, there was decreased sales for all of the fountain pen manufacturers. The public was turning toward the use of the ballpoint pen.

Marcel Birch, of France, had tremendous success in producing his cheap and reliable ballpoint pens in Europe and wanted to increase his sales to the United States. He needed to find a brand name that was already trusted by Americans and in 1958 he chose the Waterman Company, producing under the name of Waterman-Bic Corporation with headquarters in Milford, Connecticut. By 1971, the Waterman reputation had served its purpose - the name was dropped and the corporation renamed as Bic Pen.

The subsidiary in France continued to produce Waterman pens and ink as quality products. By 1988, the Gillette Company added this to their portfolio. In 2000 Newell Rubbermaid purchased the Gillette portion of its writing products but items under the original name of Waterman are still available.

Whether the story of Lewis Waterman and his desire to create a better fountain pen is a bit murky in places does not really matter as he had accomplished his goal. The 1932 ad placed by Ainslie Buck, Pharmacist, Richfield Springs, seems to express it all: 'The enduring quality together with rare beauty of design, combine to make Waterman's the biggest dollar-for-dollar value in a fountain pen and with seven different style of points from which to choose, you are certain of getting a pen that will exactly suit your style of hand writing.'

LOOKING FOR AN AFFORDABLE USED CAR?

SICK OF BUYING rusty junk off of Craigslist and then spending more than you paid for it trying to get it functional or to pass inspection? At Central Auto Sales I take pride in buying quality cars that are still in excellent condition that can supply you with many miles of service in the future. I typically buy my cars from states south of NY to avoid the rust associated with local cars. I have a nice selection of cars in the affordable $4-6K range, most are low miles or low miles for the age. I'm a lifetime resident of Norwich. Buy from someone local. No pressure, no fancy hype, just quality cars at fair prices! Central Auto Sales LLC, 429 Manley Road, Norwich. www.centralautosalesllc.com 607-336-6371.
