CHANGES IN 1895

Submitted by Village of Richfield Springs Historian Harriett Geywits

A letter was included in the May 1895 issue of the Mercury which had originally been contributed by a Richfield Springs correspondent to the Utica Press. It contained a description of the changes taking place at some of the largest hotels in the village during a time of important growth for the summer resort.

“The old landmarks in and about the famous hostelry formerly known, almost throughout the whole country as the American Hotel are rapidly disappearing and the average resident who has been away from home for a few months would scarcely recognize the place without eye glasses.

Eugene M. Earle, the present owner of the property had indeed worked a transformation in Richfield and the end is not yet, for he has at least a hundred men busily at work tearing down and building up. It is however, safe to say, that few, if any, summer resorts can present outside attractions equal to those of the Earlington.

Where the Davenport House once stood, Mr. Earle has constructed a magnificent park in the midst of which an electric fountain that will vie with those at the World’s Fair. The Davenport House has been moved on the eastern and southern portions of the large park lately constructed and is to be opened this season as the ‘St. James’. It is entirely remodeled and rebuilt, fitted with electric lights, steam heat, and has all the improvements including baths.

The small buildings formerly attached to, and which formed a part of the Davenport, have been made over, refitted and turned into handsome and attractive cottages. In Fact, Mr. Earle has a village of his own and a very handsome one at that.

When he completes the work he has mapped out, he will have expended an enormous sum of money and beautified and adorned his own and his neighbors property. It is the earnest wish of every resident of this community that he may reap a golden harvest to compensate him for the great outlay he has so courageously and so liberally expended.”

(The American Hotel operated from 1830-1850 when it was destroyed by fire - rebuilt in 1851 by Gen. William P. Johnson - sold to Eugene M. Earle who renamed it the Earlington in 1888. He owned it until 1907. It became known as the Bloomfield Hotel in 1915-1938 - torn down in 1943).

(The Davenport House was located just east of the Earlington Hotel. It was built in 1850 by James S. Davenport, its only owner. It had an impressive 150-foot veranda and could accommodate two hundred guests. Torn down in 1891, the Earlington Park was created in the space the hotel had occupied. This was not only a beautiful park, but a perfect place for bicycle riding, polo ponies and a variety of seasonal activities. The park was plowed up during WWI and turned into a Victory Garden).

(St. James Hotel was always advertised along with the Earlington. It was located on the south-west corner of Manley and James Streets and served as an annex of the Earlington Hotel. It faced the lawns and bicycle oval of Earlington Park. The building was taken down in 1914).

“While so much work and so much bustle has engaged the attention of everybody here, the Spring House has been steadily and quietly undergoing repairs and improvements. Mr. Proctor has never ceased making improvements in this village since he bought the Spring property, twenty years ago. This season he has filled in the low land in the eastern end of the spring park, built a cellar under the bathing establishment and in many ways improved his property and added to the attractions of the place. The fact is, Mr. Proctor has done so much here during all the twenty years he has owned the Spring House that many forget what he has done, but there are many of our older citizens who cannot forget the situation of this place in 1875.

The panic of 1873, added to local trouble, had well nigh bankrupted the village and property was practically worthless and the outlook was worse than gloomy. When PENNSAVER CLASSIFIED ADS + local buyers and sellers = quick cash.

Messrs. Leland and Proctor bid off the property at a bankrupt sale, Mr. Leland, at that time a famous hotel man, upon looking the matter over, became frightened at the elephant he had just obtained and proposed to Mr. Proctor that they pay the forfeit and refuse to buy the property, but Mr. Proctor neither than nor since was in the habit of paying forfeit and while it was a terrible load to put upon the shoulders of a young man in his position, he promptly informed Mr. Leland that the sale was bona fide and that he should keep the property. From that day to this, Richfield has had cause to rejoice over that decision. Within three years, Mr. Proctor had built up a flourishing business and in building up his own business he built up his neighbors. Every dollar he invested in improvements to his own premises improved every other property and the result is that today, property here has an established value and the place has never been upon a firmer or more solid basis and it cannot be denied or doubted that to T. R. Proctor belongs the credit.

For more than fifty years the name of J. Davenport was identified with every improvement introduced or projected here. His name was a household word. No man in trouble ever thought of applying for help except to him and no man was ever turned away. His name was on every man’s tongue and when, after his death, his property was swallowed up by his own and other people’s creditors very few among all of his friends thought it was due him to say anything more than ‘I thought Jim was worth more money.’ Mr. Proctor, however, thought of something else. He thought of and purchased a large and expensive water trough cut out of solid stone and had engraved upon it in large letters: ‘Erected to the memory of James S. Davenport’. This spring the trough will be placed by the side of the lake road upon the farm of Dr. Getman. If poor Davenport could select his own monument, this inspiration of Mr. Proctor’s would be the one about all others he would choose. It is an honor to one of our best and the most respected citizens and a credit to another and is deeply appreciated by the entire community.” (He died in 1891).
