In 1890 advertisements appeared in the MERCURY as follows: 'Workers Wanted - Apply at Waiontha Knitting Mill'

Submitted by Village of Richfield Springs Historian Harriett Geywits

The mill had been established with the intention of manufacturing and selling knit goods which would provide local citizens with a means of year-round employment. The building was a two-story one that was 64 x 44 feet, thoroughly equipped with the latest in improved machinery and had all the modern conveniences that were available at that time. Employment was given to over fifty people who produced dozens and dozens of long underwear - more commonly called 'Union Suits'. The factory was originally on Lake Street.

Later that year, after the superintendent was found to be negligent in running the mill, a new manager was chosen. More machinery was installed, making it possible for the workers to manufacture summer as well as winter underwear.

The manufacture of 'union suits' began in Utica, NY, and originated as women's wear during the 19th century, an alternative to the constricting garments of earlier generations. Men soon saw the usefulness of such garments and their popularity grew. The winter garments (usually in red) had long arms and legs, buttoning up the front with a button-up flap in the rear which became known as an access hatch or drop seat. Summer garments were of white with short sleeves. We often refer to these garments as 'Long Johns' but there is a difference in that union suits are one piece and long johns are two pieces. The name for these two-piece garments is attributed to the famous boxer John L. Sullivan who always entered the ring wearing only his long underwear bottoms.

All went well until April of 1899 when there was a fire that destroyed a large quantity of goods at the Waiontha mill. This didn't stop the production of goods and by 1900, the mill was rushed with orders with as high as two-thousand garments per week turned out. Ads for more workers continued as the business grew. The pay at that time was ten cents per hour.

By 1904, the facilities were found to be inadequate and a new knitting mill was constructed on Elm Street Extension. The Lackawanna Railroad Company had ties ready for the purpose of laying a new switch to accommodate the mill. Arrangements had been made with the water commissioner for the extension of Village water mains to the building which was heated by steam. Sidewalks were added for the safety of workers who walked to their jobs.

The new mill was opened in February for public inspection. The old mill on Lake Street was for sale - used for a time as an evaporating plant where hundreds of bushels of apples were processed.

By 1909, the Utica Knitting Mill consolidated with Waiontha and took over running the business. Even with the high price of cotton during 1910 which affected the earnings of the company, they managed to show a good profit. The product produced had an advance sale for a year. There were also plants under Utica Knitting in Clayville, Sherburne and two plants in Utica as well as the one in Richfield and they all ran night and day.

The need for workers and a place to house them continued. In 1917, eight new dwelling houses were ready to be occupied, built for the use of workers at the mill with reasonable rent, free water rates and plenty of work with good wages at the knitting mill. These were located on Linden Avenue.

To help the situation, the Utica Knitting Mill became the owners of what was to be known as the Colony House. This home was built in prior years by the father of F. M. Zuller, an area photographer. The elder Mr. Zuller was a carpenter by trade and the building which was made of selected timber, cost him $14,500, aside from his own labor on it. The building of this home was responsible for the opening of Bronner Street. George Bronner, who owned the site, agreed to extend the street if Mr. Zuller built the house. Its ownership history included the Bringloe family, Charles Conway and then the Utica Knitting Company.

Workers for the mill were brought from what was then called the Rome State School which was started in 1894. They provided a system of education that was geared to the ability of those attending and work opportunities were started for boys and girls. A large number of older boys were employed on various farms while the girls were employed as domestic or factory workers.

The Colony acted as a working-girl's club. They were easy to supervise as they all were living in one place and working at the mill. Not only was their work supervised but their recreation and health were also an important part of their lives. They were not too closely supervised, however. It was the thought of the school that if you give people an opportunity to do a good job and do not watch them too closely they usually do well. A man and wife were hired to supervise the home. Mr. and Mrs. Manzer were in charge of the working girls here.

About one-third of the girls' earnings were given directly to them for the purchase of clothing and other personal items. Another portion was placed in the bank to the credit of the girl who earned it and the remainder went into a fund which was used to provide things that the State did not provide. Citizens accepted these girls into local activities with picnics, meetings and special suppers. The ladies of St. John's Episcopal Church showed special concern and in return, the girls often reciprocated with supper or a program including song and dance, held at the parish hall.

All went well until 1921 when the Colony House burned. According to the writeup in the MERCURY: "Sunday Morning Blaze Results in Total Loss - All Occupants Saved - Knitting Company to Rebuild. Discovered by Mrs. Manzer at about 5:30 Sunday morning, there was very little furniture and scarcely any clothing saved but there was no loss of life among the twenty-seven girls from the Rome Custodial home who were under the charge of the Manzners.

Mrs. Manzer smelled smoke and Mr. Manzer's investigation took him first to the cellar. Then he went to the enclosure at the rear of the house which held the kitchen and found that those rooms were ablaze. The girls from the second and third floors were removed to the home of Mrs. J.C. Waffle next door. Then the alarm was sent in. Within five minutes of the time of the alarm, the fire department's truck went down James Street to the site. Though the fire had gained considerable headway and was fanned by a strong south wind, the fireman thought at first that they would be able to overcome and extinguish the blaze, but it soon got beyond control and at eight o'clock, the building was in ruins. While most of the girls were without clothing, the residents of the village were generous in seeing that the young women got clothing and essentials and were able to start work in the knitting mill Monday morning. They were all taken to the Richfield Hotel where they were being housed until other quarters can be supplied. All are employed in the local branch of the Utica Knitting Company and this company owned the building destroyed. The total insurance on the building was $4500. Officials of Utica Knitting were here Sunday and stated that a new building would be erected on the old site."

Construction on a new house began almost immediately and the business of the knitting mill continued to be profitable - for a short time. By 1922 there was a notice in the paper that a reduction of 12 1/2 % in wages would take place. In 1928, the mill was closed for a week due to lack of work for the operators. In August of 1932, the knitting mill closed permanently. The machinery and other equipment was shipped to Anniston, Alabama. The Colony Girls were sent to other facilities around the state where they continued to provide help where needed and were schooled to the best of their abilities. It wasn't until July of 1936 that the ShurKatch Fishing Tackle Company showed an interest in the old mill.

In 1938, Charles Ostrander purchased the former Colony House on Bronner Street from the Utica Knitting Company. In 1940, the Colony House was advertised at auction with the description being a three story, fifteen room home with steam heat, electricity and water, two baths, hardwood floors, laundry, and slate roof on a three-acre lot for $2500. It was purchased by Jack Wilkinson who was then the manager of the I. L. Richer Co. feed mill nearby.

Eco-friendly lawn care can be easy

Homeowners know that a healthy lawn can add considerable curb appeal to a property while giving residents of the home a place to relax and enjoy the great outdoors. But few might know that a healthy lawn can also benefit the environment, especially when homeowners take a proactive approach to lawn care that emphasizes eco-friendly techniques.

A proactive approach to lawn care can prevent certain problems, including disease, insect infestation and weed growth. When such problems arise, many homeowners opt to combat them with pesticides, which can harm the environment. But a proactive approach to lawn care can reduce the likelihood of developing such problems and protect the planet at the same time.

- Emphasize healthy soil. Healthy soil promotes strong roots, which leads to a more robust, lush and aesthetically appealing lawn. While a lawn needs to be fertilized in the spring and at various points throughout the summer, it's important that homeowners avoid overfertilization, which can create thatch that, when allowed to thicken, will prevent nutrients from penetrating the soil. Lawns need more nitrogen, phosphorous and potassium than soil can typically provide, so fertilizing throughout the warm weather seasons and into early fall can promote a healthy lawn. But choose a slow-release fertilizer so it gradually feeds the lawn. Compost and grass clippings can also be spread around the lawn to promote healthy soil. The pH level of the soil should also be checked to ensure the lawn can fully absorb nutrients. Speak with a local lawn care professional to determine what a healthy pH level is for soil in your area.

- Choose a grass that can thrive in your climate. Though you might prefer the look of a certain grass, choosing a grass based entirely on appearance is a mistake that could cost you money and prove harmful to the environment. When installing a new lawn, opt for one that's suitable to the local climate. Installing a lawn that needs substantial amounts of water in a region known for drought can rob the lawn of its aesthetic appeal and will cost homeowners a substantial amount of money to maintain. If an existing lawn struggles to stay green regardless of your best efforts, then consider replacing it with a new type of grass that might be more suited to the local climate.

- Don't cut too low when mowing. Homeowners who don't enjoy mowing their lawn might be tempted to simply cut the grass as low as possible to extend the intervals between cuts. But the United States Environmental Protection Agency recommends that grass never be cut more than one-third of the height of the grass blades. Longer grass can take in more sunlight, allowing it to grow in thicker and develop a deeper root system. That deep root system can help a lawn survive drought and prevent disease, two potentially costly problems that often force homeowners to embrace solutions that are not eco-friendly. Ideal lawn height depends on the type of grass, so consult a lawn care professional to ensure you are cutting your grass to a healthy length.

- Avoid overwatering. Excessive watering not only wastes water, which is not very eco-friendly, but also hurts the lawn when dry periods inevitably arrive. That's because shallow and frequent watering encourages roots to stay near the surface, so when dry periods arrive, the roots struggle to find water. The EPA notes that an established lawn should not need daily watering. Instead, watering responsibly when the lawn needs water and when evaporation can be kept to a minimum, can strengthen a lawn and do so in an eco-friendly way. GT144076

Spring lawn seeding basics

Spring has sprung, and there are many activities to enjoy now that the warmer weather has arrived. Many homeowners make the most of warmer weather by tackling projects around their properties. While autumn is a better time to overseed a lawn for new growth, satisfactory results still can be had if seeding is done early enough in the spring. Grass needs ample time to establish roots and grow strong before the summer heat takes its toll. Many types of grass need six to 12 weeks of ideal temperatures and growing conditions to germinate and produce a sturdy grass that will grow and endure.

Seeding can be done to rejuvenate an existing lawn and fill in bare spots. It also can be done to start a lawn from scratch. The following are some tips to help make seeding projects more successful.

- Begin by raking the lawn to remove thatch and any fallen leaves leftover from autumn and winter. Raking also enables you to inspect the lawn for bare patches or matting of grass that may be indicative of a fungus or other problem.
- Dust off the mower and trim the lawn short, especially if it was left long at the end of last season. This will help seed penetrate the blades of grass and get to the soil beneath.
- High-traffic lawns may need aeration to counteract compacted soil. Moss on the ground is often an indication of compaction. Aeration will help with this problem, as it pokes holes into the soil to enable oxygenation that keeps new grass robust and promotes faster growth. Lawn aerators can be rented from many garden centers.

- Spread a mixture of topsoil and compost over the top of the lawn. This will add nutrients through organic matter to the lawn and create a good base for the new seed to take root. It will also help strengthen any existing grass and promote long-term health.
  - Test a sample of the soil to check the pH. Grass prefers a neutral pH, but some soil tends to lean toward the acidic side, especially if you see the presence of moss. Knowing the pH will help determine just how much lime per square foot you will need to adjust it accordingly. Liming is a corrective measure and does not need to be used on a healthy, thriving lawn.
  - Invest in a spreader to add seed to the lawn. The spreader will have various settings that enable you to calibrate the rate of seed dispersion depending on your walking speed. Fill the spreader with seed and begin to walk around the lawn. Drop spreaders require you to apply seed in rows with no overlap. Broadcast spreaders will cast seed widely and may need some overlap to guarantee complete coverage.
  - Spread another thin layer of compost mix over the seed and water thoroughly. The compost will help keep moisture in while the seeds germinate.
  - Aim for lawn watering two to three times per day. The seed should be barely dry between watering. After seeds have germinated and established, you can reduce the frequency of watering but increase the depth of the watering to keep roots strong.
  - Avoid foot traffic on a newly seeded lawn until the grass is well established.

Grass-Free Landscaping a Viable Alternative

Many homeowners equate a beautiful landscape to rolling acres of pristine lawn. But changes in the climate and widespread seasonal restrictions on water use each year could change the way people think about outfitting their yards. There are many reasons people choose to forgo grass and opt for different ornamental elements in their yards. Cost is one factor. While grass seed is relatively inexpensive, the upkeep, including mowing, fertilizing, re-seeding, and watering, requires a significant investment of both time and money. Many homeowners choose to lay down sod to create a beautiful lawn, an expensive option for homeowners with vast landscapes. The environment is another reason homeowners look for grass alternatives. Grass requires a lot of upkeep, much of which is not environmentally friendly. For example, maintaining a pristine lawn requires the use of a gas-powered mower and oftentimes the application of chemical fertilizers and pesticides. Seeking alternatives to grass can be friendly on both the wallet and the environment.

Grass-Free Landscaping Alternatives

For those who are ready to say goodbye to grass, there are many alternatives.

- Ground cover: Homeowners who still desire the look of green can choose among different types of ground cover that will quickly fill in the landscape. Clover, low-growing evergreen plants and ivy are some of the more popular ground cover alternatives.

- Rocks: Decorative rocks intermingled with native plants can add dimension and color to the yard. Once rocks are placed, there is little upkeep except for pulling the errant weeds.

- Mulch: A less expensive alternative to rocks is mulch. Mulch is available in different colors and types and can even be created by a homeowner by chipping trimmed branches from trees in the yard. It helps lock water into landscaping beds, decreasing the need for frequent watering.

- Water features: Think about installing a pond in the yard that can be bordered with stones and mulch. This will take up a good amount of space and can create a natural habitat for wildlife and even some low-maintenance pond fish.

- Concrete Or Patio Stones: Although they're not all-natural materials, patios can take up areas normally consumed by the lawn and create expansive outdoor entertaining areas. It will require an initial investment of the patio material, but once installed, patios don't require significant maintenance.

Homeowners can offset the concrete jungle feel by placing plenty of potted plants and container foliage around the perimeter.

- Decking: Another alternative to concrete and stones is a wood or composite material deck. Again, this structure will increase outdoor living space and won't require the level of routine maintenance needed to keep a lush lawn.

PENNSAVER

A Healthy Pet Is a Happy Pet.

You love your pet, so make sure he stays safe and healthy all year round. How?

- Take a note of your pet's behavior when healthy. This will make it much easier to recognize when your pet is acting strangely - a strong indication that he is sick.
- Keep your pet's vaccinations up-to-date.
- Don't leave pets unattended in the car, even with the windows down.

LOOKING FOR AN AFFORDABLE USED CAR?

SICK OF BUYING rusty junk off of an individual or online and then spending more than you paid for it trying to get it functional or to pass inspection? At Central Auto Sales I take pride in buying quality cars that are still in excellent condition that can supply you with many miles of service in the future. I typically buy my cars from states south of NY to avoid the rust associated with local cars. I have a nice selection of cars in the affordable $4-6K range, most are low miles or low miles for the age. I'm a lifetime resident of Norwich. Buy from someone local. No pressure, no fancy hype, just quality cars at fair prices! Central Auto Sales LLC, 429 Manley Road, Norwich. www.centralautosalesllc.com 607-336-6371.
